"Meditation Radio is pretty funny. Australian made is a clever, conceptual way to get people to buy Australian. Like the social component."

- MARGARET JOHNSON, CCO - GOODBY SILVERSTEIN & PARTNERS SAN FRANCISCO

"Electrolux radio is well written and simple, especially “Biscuits”, which gets at the truth about how much we hate cleaning and this machine will help us through it. iiinet simple spot that highlights both the speed and limitless data in an unexpected way. “Escape to the Movies” is extremely PR worthy."

Title: Biscuits

Meditation Guru: OmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOm [7 seconds]

You are completely relaxed.
Let go of all worries, as you peacefully suck biscuit crumbs from under the kids' beds.
For the third time this week.

FVO: Stay calm with the Electrolux UltraSilencer Canister Vacuum.

Title: Cats

Meditation Guru: OmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOm [7 seconds]

Silently observe your worries float away.
As the long, white cat hair.
Covering the passenger seat.
Vanishes before your eyes.

FVO: Stay calm with the Electrolux UltraSilencer Canister Vacuum.

Title: Fried Rice

Meditation Guru: OmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOmOm [7 seconds]

Inhale deeply.
Release the breath fully.
Do not ask how fried rice got into the folds of the couch.
Simply vacuum it away, along with the question.

FVO: Stay calm with the Electrolux UltraSilencer Canister Vacuum.

<tr>
<td>Background:</td>
<td>Fewer people are going to the cinema these days. Previous campaigns have identified cost, lack of choice and lack of enticements as root causes but success has been limited because:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>• It's not cost – many cinemas offer $10 tickets and fluid pricing apps have been introduced.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>• It's not lack of choice – some cinemas even play HBO series nowadays and too much choice can be exhausting.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>• It's not lack of enticements - cinemas offer local craft beer, Champagne, cheese platters and reclining seats.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Key insights:</td>
<td>Cinema used to be considered a fun way to relax but our culture of convenience, high-tech entertainment systems and unlimited streaming options have made us too comfortable at home.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>We binge-watch Netflix and Stan in athleisure wear on the couch. But people only binge when they are not satisfied. We don’t need to binge at the cinema because cinema is so satisfying. It is a social experience with atmosphere and crowd dynamic. Because it is such a delight to the senses, one movie fulfills.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Cinema needs to get back on the cultural radar for people to be reminded of these truths.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Support:</td>
<td>(1) Cinema is a community event – you see and interact with other people.</td>

Topic: Strategy – Write and answer your own brief
Client/Product: Australian cinema
Proposition: Our comfortable homes keep us from a more satisfying social experience at the cinema.
Insight: This campaign uses actors because they have a vested interest in promoting cinema to increase ticket sales. This is their campaign as much as it is ours.
Idea:

Escape to the Movies

Everyday Australians are saved from the confines of their homes by Hollywood heroes.

Brad Pitt’s here to save you.

All the most popular A-List actors (think Brad Pitt, Johnny Depp, Jennifer Lawrence, Chris Pratt, Ryan Gosling, Emma Stone, Leo, D’Caprio, Will Smith, Scarlett Johansson etc.) in Australia to promote new movies will rock on random front doors of suburban Australian homes to save the occupant’s from their homes by inviting them to the local cinema.

The overall feel will be in a similar vein to James Gordon’s popular Carpool carpool.

I’m here to save you from your home and take you to the cinema right now – let’s go!

The actor will chat with the participant about the way cinema makes them feel throughout the hang-out session before the movie starts. For example, they will joke about how tall they look on the big screen and how they feel so much more energy than when at home alone. As the focus of all conversation is cinema, there is minimal risk of celebrity vampire effect.

The events will be filmed by us and posted to the actor’s social media pages to engage their fanbase and initiate sharing. The final 5 minutes will be posted to Facebook Live with the entire footage posted within the hour.

Each participant is able to post selfies and their own footage of the event to social media.

The campaign is designed so that participants actively experience a sensation of thrill because that is the same feeling you get at the cinema.
Those watching on social media will see that.
This campaign will get cinema back onto the cultural radar.

Execution 3:
- Media: Digital media
- Copy:
  - "The saying that all babies born in Australian hospitals are born in Australian made items is true, from the right brands.
  - "The milk pattern is designed to look like the Australian flag, always visible when wrapped around the baby."
Topic: Digital
Client / Product: Scoot low cost flights
Proposition: See the world on your budget.

Idea: We add photo comments on food and drink pics posted to Instagram by 18-30 year olds in cities where Scoot flies showing them they could be enjoying that same food or drink in its authentic setting for the cost of X number of that dish.

#thai#thai: User will receive a pic of red curry being cooked at a Thai street stall with the comment “the real thing is 7 red curries away”.

Countless variations include: #curry #thai #food #thai (Indian cities) #sushi #steak (Osaka/Tokyo), #padthai #thailand (BKK).

This campaign draws on 18-30 year olds’ love of Instagram food pics and appeals to their strong desire to seek authentic experience. It shows how surprisingly low Scoot airfares are and suggests a simple way to save money to travel.

BEHIND THE SCENES (technical side):
* An algorithm:
  o Scans Instagram hashtags posted from the accounts of 18-30 year olds in Australian cities of dishes and drinks in Scoot’s destination cities;
  o uses the geolocation of the user and the location of the dish’s origin to calculate the flight cost for a one-way ticket with Scoot, e.g. a ticket to Thailand from Sydney costs $141;
  o divides the cost of the ticket into the average cost per assigned to that dish, e.g. red curry noodle at $10 per dish in Sydney = 7 red curries away.
* We set up a secondary Scoot Instagram account to receive and to add the same #Scoot as a clickable link to the comments as this is the only way to get a clickable link into a regular Instagram comment without using Instagram.
  The #Scoot account contains flight booking rules / links.
IDEA: We create "The Lighthouse" – a clear Perspex house filled with light from Hue bulbs.

The Lighthouse will be located storefront at Glewrig Beach's Mouseley Square where there is foot traffic after dark including many who will have time to engage. The Lighthouse cannot be entered but its interior is clearly visible to those walking past.

Digital screens inside the house display simple instructions so anyone with a smartphone can download the Hue app to change the colour of the lights (wall by wall).

They can also select music from Hue's extensive "The Lighthouse" playlist on Spotify.

The playlist features tracks about Lighthouses spanning all genres and the music will interact with the lights when played.

Extension: We install Philips Hue Lightboxes at popular coastal locations across the country such as Byron Bay.

Marriage equality is good for Australia

Insight: Most people who do not support marriage equality in Australia are older (support decreasing with age). To help these people to appreciate the problem of marriage inequality we will focus on an issue of a similar nature that is likely to apply to them or those close to them: the lack of acknowledgement of couples in aged care.

Background: Many older Australians have family members facing the prospect of aged care or will be looking at options for themselves or their partners. A distressing reality for these people is that spouses can be separated in old age as they are often unable to attend the same care home or are placed in separate rooms or given single beds and no privacy. There is no uniformity in how facilities deal with this issue.

Until there is marriage equality, institutional disregard for significant adult relationships is a daily reality for LGBTI Australians.

Idea: Equality Australia will create the world’s first database of the aged care providers that enable couples to remain together in care (regardless of their sexual orientation). The database will be accessible as a user-friendly location-based search engine called “Respect My Relationship” and will be used by older Australians searching for couple-friendly options for themselves or family members.

Centres meeting defined criteria will be awarded with the “Respect My Relationship” quality standard featuring the Equality Australia logo. Comprehensive directories such as Aged Care Guide can use the logo to indicate those centres which respect all significant relationships (regardless of orientation).

Older Australians previously closed to the idea of marriage equality will be looking out for the Equality Australia logo to find the facilities that respect relationships – including their own.
